Twenty Years In, It Still Feels Like Day One

Hello NACK Tribe,

Twenty years ago, when we started NACK, one of the greatest feelings I had was seeing someone wear a piece we had created. There was something beautiful about watching an idea that started in my head become a part of someone else's story. Twenty years later, that feeling hasn't changed.

As we celebrate 20 years of telling African stories through fashion, I am reminded that no matter how far we have come, there is always room for a new beginning. And that's exactly what inspired FARKO, our newest NACK Her collection.

FARKO is a Hausa word that means "The Beginning." For me, this collection is a reminder that every beautiful story starts somewhere. And sometimes, even after twenty years, you can still find yourself feeling the same excitement you felt on day one. What excites me the most is knowing that these pieces will find their way into your wardrobes, become part of your memories, and tell stories of their own.

So, if there's a piece from FARKO that speaks to you, I would love to know which one and why. Simply reply to this email and tell me. After twenty years, I'm still just as excited to hear your stories as I am to tell ours.

With love,

Tolu Akinpeloye
